Want to study an East Asian language with full funding? Apply for a FLAS!

The Center for East Asian Studies (CEAS) is accepting new applications for the Academic Year 2018-19 FLAS Fellowships. This is a special competition (after the regular one held in Spring 2018) to award additional fellowships for use in the current academic year.

Application deadline is Friday, September 28, 2018.

FLAS (Foreign Language and Area Studies) fellowships are funded by the U.S. Department of Education and administered by the Center for East Asian Studies to assist graduate and undergraduate students in acquiring foreign language and either area or international studies competencies. Applicants must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents of the United States. Applications by students in professional fields are encouraged. Preference will be given to applicants with a high level of academic ability and with previous language training.

For more details about applying, visit the UW-Madison FLAS site \(flas.wisc.edu\)

PLEASE NOTE that while this website says “the application period for AY 2018-19 FLAS is now closed,” applicants should ignore the message and proceed with their applications. CLICK on https://flas.wisc.edu/apply/ to log in. You will then need to select the “submit a new application” option.

Eligibility and Languages

This competition is open to both undergraduate and graduate students. To be eligible, students must be enrolled in at least one language class and one area studies class in both the fall and spring semesters of the grant. Eligible students may apply to study the following languages with a FLAS award.:

Chinese
Japanese
Korean
Tibetan

Fellowships and awards. For the academic year, the FLAS stipend is $5,000 for undergraduate students and $15,000 for graduate students. Undergraduates receive up to $10,000 towards tuition; graduate students receive full tuition and fees.
